A correspondent of the Knickerbocker, writing years agone, from the Green-mountain State, sends some "juristical" anecdotes that will bear repetition. Among them is one of Judge P., an eminent jurist of those days. One of his sheriffs was a longlegged, lank, lean, awkward Yankee; DEHAVEN, STEWART & OSBORNE, bashful withal, a stutterer and stammerer; and with a voice like the tearing of a stay-sail out of a bolt rope.

Here is another: The late Bates Turner, of Vermont, (of whom every fun lover within five hundred miles has heard, and of whom more humorous sayings are recorded than of any other man in Vermont,) was as witty a man as he was learned jurist. He had a quick, subtle, and acute mind, with a nervous and very hurried manner; speaking so fast, when talking, that it was difficult for the listener to keep up with his words. He was many years on the bench. On one occasion a young and zealous lawyer, not over punctilious in his allusions to the Court, nor very formal in his manner, was arguing a law-question before the Judge; and in the course of his argument, by way of illustration, wished to "suppose a case." We will suppose your Honor,' said he, 'that your Honor were to steal a horse-'No! no!' interrupted the Judge; 'not at all! not at all! 'tain't a supposable case.' 'Very well, begging your Honor's pardon, proceeded the eager

Proceed, Mr. S---. Mr. S- proceeded to take a seat, amid the shouts of his bretheren, and had the good sense to take the joke in good part, and to repeat it often to his friends. Judge Turner was in the practice of his profession, he once conducted a petty litigation between two very mean men, about a yery small matter, and finally succeeded in promoting his case to the county court, to be heard by a judge presiding therein, who shall be nameless. This judge, alfor his learning and ability, had lost their confidence in his integrity, and was generally deemed corrupt - He was a man of stately, dignified presence, although at times a little "pompous." Mr. Turner's case was laid before his honor, and had been proceeded in far enough for the judge to catch a glimpse of the nature of it and its litigants, when he stopped Mr. Turner in a very grave dignified manner: "Mr. Turner, this seems to be rather a triffing case: why not advise your client to submit it to the candid, mpartial arbitrament of two or three good honest men, and so not trouble the court?" "Ah! yes, yes, yes! your honor," broke in Mr. Turner. in his usual hurried manner, and a sparkling snap of his sharp, 'practised eye,' as he addressed the Judge, (for whom by the way, he had not a high regard.) 'yes, yes! your honor, but this is just precisely one of the cases we do not wish o trouble an honest man with!" Mr. with him all the learning and experience he had acquired during a long practice : "Yes, yes!" said the judge ; but console yourself that you would carry back a very light pack indeed hardly worth the journey!" He had a very intimate friend and neighbor, who was very methodical (and withal rather eccentric) in the commonest affairs of life. Among other things, this neighbor had a dog a fine noble fellow, that was a genera favorite, and with whom his master kept a regular and precise book-account, charging the dog with his board, etc., etc., and crediting him with services whenever he rendered any. It so happened that the dog killed a cow, by breaking her neck, for which his master had to pay dearly, and so he killed the dog. Upon examining, and adjusting the account with his dog, after his demise, the animal was found to be greatly in debt to his master. Of this he was complaining one day to the judge in mock-mourning style, when judge Turner briefly remarked, nudging his friend, "Yes, yes, M-; no knowing how the dog's accounts would have stood if he had only hand an

At meal-time I noticed that instead of printed "bills of fare," the Colonel stationed himself at one end of the dining-room, and in a voice loud enough to be heard far outside the room named over, for the information of his guests, the articles that had been prepared for the table. The great lovelty of this procedure induced me to ask the Colonel how the habit orig-
